

Join the union that has your back.

<https://bit.ly/join-tx-aaup>

PROTECT YOUR RIGHT TO ACADEMIC FREEDOM

Faculty at Texas universities are facing unprecedented demands to censor their teaching, scholarship, and speech. This document lays out your right to academic freedom and equips you with strategies to protect those rights. While the law, and The Texas A&M System, and your institution's policies provide important safeguards, these protections mean little if faculty preemptively surrender to politically motivated censorship. Protecting our academic freedom requires that we stand together, resist undue interference, and demand due process at every step.

Know Your Rights

The official policies of The Texas A&M University System express a commitment to academic freedom:

Institutions of higher education exist for the common good. The common good depends upon an uninhibited search for truth and its open expression.... Each faculty member must be free from the corrosive fear that others, inside or outside the academic community, because their vision may differ, may threaten the faculty member's professional career or the material benefits accruing from it.^[1]

Academic Freedom in Teaching: You have the freedom to discuss all relevant matters in the classroom. This includes the right of faculty members to select the materials, determine the approach to the subject, make the assignments, and assess student academic performance in teaching activities for which they are individually responsible. Faculty members are entitled to freedom in the classroom in discussing their subject, but they should be careful not to introduce into their teaching controversial matters which are unrelated to their subject, or to persistently introduce material which has no relation to the subject. This doesn't mean teachers should avoid all controversial materials. As long as the material stimulates debate and learning that is germane to the subject matter, it is protected by freedom in the classroom.

Federal or state executive orders cannot curtail academic freedom. While executive orders may guide executive branch agencies, they cannot override the First Amendment's protections for speech and academic inquiry. Courts have already made this clear. Specifically, they have determined that President Trump's executive order barring government support for expressions of "gender ideology" violates the First Amendment's bar on regulating speech on the basis of its content.^[2] Similarly, Governor Abbott's order directing Texas Agencies to recognize only two sexes—male and female—cannot override faculties' First Amendment right to academic freedom in teaching. Moreover, Texas Law HB 229 defines sex solely for the purpose of the state's collection of information. A legal requirement that "a government entity that collects vital statistics on the sex of an individual . . . shall identify each individual as either male or female" has no bearing on what happens in the classrooms of state institutions of higher education.

Consistent with these principles, The Texas A&M System Policies state that "Each faculty member is entitled to full freedom in the classroom in discussing the subject that the faculty member teaches, but should be introduce controversial matter that has no relation to the classroom subject."^[3]

Academic Freedom in Research: You have the freedom to explore all avenues of scholarship, research, and creative expression and to publish the results of such work.

Consistent with these principles, The Texas A&M System Policies state that "it is essential that each faculty member be free to pursue scholarly inquiry and to voice and publish individual conclusions concerning the significance of evidence that the faculty member considers relevant."^[4]

Academic Freedom in Speech: You have freedom from institutional censorship or discipline when addressing matters of institutional policy or action.

You have freedom from institutional censorship or discipline when speaking or writing as a citizen. But faculty members' special position imposes special obligations. When speaking on public matters, faculty members should strive to be accurate, should exercise appropriate restraint, should show appropriate respect for the opinions of others, and should make every effort to indicate that they are not speaking for the institution.

Consistent with these principles, The Texas A&M System Policies state that “Each faculty member is also a citizen of the national, state and community; and when speaking, writing, or acting as such, must be free from institutional censorship or discipline, subject to academic responsibility.”^[5]

Due Process: Faculty at The Texas A&M System have the right to due process under the U.S. and Texas Constitutions and The Texas A&M System policies. This means that all faculty members must be treated fairly and consistently in matters related to their employment.

Dismissals: The Texas A&M System Policies protect you against unfair dismissals.^[6]

- In general, the decision to dismiss faculty member must be for good cause, such as serious neglect of your duties or professional incompetence.
- A dismissal may not violate your constitutional right to freedom of expression, and cannot be used to restrain faculty in the exercise of academic freedom. You cannot be dismissed for arbitrary reasons or in response to political pressure.
- In general, prior to summary dismissal or suspension without pay, you must be given written notice that clearly explains the reasons for your dismissal or suspension.
- In general, you cannot be summarily dismissed or suspended without pay without first being given a hearing before a hearing committee where you may respond to the charges and present evidence in your defense.

Other Matters: You have the right to initiate a grievance^[7] if you believe you have been treated unfairly.

- Grievance rights apply broadly, including to any action that infringes upon your academic freedom, such as being directed to change your syllabus or when you comply with an administrator’s request under duress.
- The grievance process typically is a multilevel process. You should first attempt to resolve your grievance informally through discussions with the appropriate administrator (such as your department chair or dean) and, if needed, the Faculty Ombudsperson (if your institution has one). If these informal efforts do not resolve the matter, you generally have the right to pursue a formal grievance. This may include the right to a hearing before your Provost or their designee, a college-level grievance committee, and/or a university-wide grievance committee. Familiarize yourself with the specific grievance policy on your campus. If you need help navigating those procedures, reach out to Texas-AAUP-AFT.

Protect Your Rights

Avoid Anticipatory Compliance: When confronted by a chair, dean, or other administrator's demands, it is natural to feel pressure to agree on the spot. Don't. Quick capitulation gives administrators what they want before faculty can respond collectively. Instead, slow things down. Say something like, "I need to review the policy and consider this before making any changes." This buys time to consult with colleagues and, if necessary, develop a collective strategy. Academic freedom is not just an individual right, but a shared foundation that protects all faculty, our students, and our democracy. Standing firm – even if only by refusing to act immediately – protects all of us.

Ask Questions: When you are called into a meeting with a chair, dean, or other administrator who is pressuring you to change your teaching, remove course material, or is threatening to take disciplinary action, do not simply accept their assertions. Asking questions forces administrators to explain themselves, slows down the rush to judgment, and makes it harder for them to act on vague political demands. Asking questions also signals that you are not going to comply blindly and that you expect administrators to justify their actions with facts and policy, not politics:

- Ask them what specific law or university policy they believe you have violated or that they are enforcing. If they cite university policy, ask if the university policy is in writing.
- Ask them why they believe the law or university policy prohibits or requires certain action, such as changing your syllabus.
- If you have been accused of violating the law or university policy, ask them why they believe you are in violation of the law or policy, including what evidence they are relying on.
- Ask what the consequences will be if you are found to have violated the law or policy they are relying on.
- Ask them what process they have followed or will follow as part of their enforcement of the law/policy or investigation into your actions. Also ask what steps come next.
- Ask them who you should reach out to if you have any questions or concerns.
- Ask them to put their responses to your questions in writing.

Create a record of what you were told. Consider recording the conversation, although you should inform administrators that you are recording the conversation. Take notes. Following the conversation, document everything that was said to the best of your recollection. If they refuse to answer any of your questions, document that as well. Email that documentation to colleagues who were also at the meeting, or email it to yourself, so that it is time-stamped, or email it to the person conducting the meeting and ask something like if you believe this summary is incorrect, please let me know.

Demand Due Process/Initiate a Grievance: If you are threatened with dismissal, insist on your right to due process, including the right to written notice and a hearing. For any matter where you are treated unfairly or your academic freedom is at risk, initiate a grievance. Every grievance that is filed forces administrators to stop, respond, and justify their actions — this both creates a written record of their actions and throws sand in the gears of efforts to curtail academic freedom. The more faculty who insist on these procedures, the harder it becomes for those in power to impose broad restrictions.

Join AAUP: The American Association of University Professors (AAUP) is a tireless advocate for the right to academic freedom and due process in this increasingly hostile environment. By becoming a member of Texas AAUP-AFT, you join a local, statewide and national movement fighting for and defending the rights of faculty, graduate students, and academic staff.

As an AAUP member, you gain access to:

- An Office of Faculty Representation to help members facing investigations, disciplinary actions, or dismissals.
- Legal representation of up to $8 million in occupational liability coverage (including coverage of $35k in criminal defense fees for activity engaged in while at work) and a legal defense fund that offers a free consultation with an employment lawyer and coverage of personal attorney's fees. Learn more here.
- Advocacy on campus and at the Texas Legislature, amplified by the 66,000 members and 40+ staff in Texas AFT, including organizers, lobbyists, policy analysts, IT, media consultants, and lawyers.

Membership is confidential and dues are on a sliding scale based on your academic income (ranging from $13 to $39 per month).

Set-Up a Confidential Departmental Chat: Create a secure, confidential group chat (e.g., Signal or another encrypted platform) with trusted colleagues in your department. This allows faculty to quickly share information about threats to academic freedom, coordinate responses, and support one another. Note: Your university emails are subject to public disclosure, so avoid using your work email to communicate with colleagues about these issues.

^[1] Policy 12.01, Section 1.1 (Academic Freedom), The Texas A&M University System Policies, <https://policies.tamus.edu/12-01.pdf>

^[2] See Rhode Island Latino Arts v. NEA, No. 25-79 WES (D.R.I. Sept. 19, 2025) (noting that, in the context of reviewing applications for federal grants, if a government agency “restricted all applications that touched on the subject of ‘gender ideology,’ or on the relationship between sex and gender more broadly, that would amount to a content-based restriction on . . . speech.”)

^[3] Policy 12.01, Section 1.2 (Academic Freedom, Responsibility and Tenure), The Texas A&M University System Policies, <https://policies.tamus.edu/12-01.pdf>

^[4] Policy 12.01, Section 1.1 (Academic Freedom, Responsibility and Tenure), The Texas A&M University System Policies, <https://policies.tamus.edu/12-01.pdf>

^[5] Policy 12.01, Section 1.2 (Academic Freedom, Responsibility and Tenure), The Texas A&M University System Policies, <https://policies.tamus.edu/12-01.pdf>

^[6] Policy 12.01, Sections 4-8 The Texas A&M University System Policies, <https://policies.tamus.edu/12-01.pdf>

^[7] <https://policies.tamus.edu/32-01.pdf>;

<https://www.tamusa.edu/about-us/provost/documents/Faculty-Handbook.pdf>;

<https://www.tamuct.edu/wp-content/uploads/2025/05/2023-SAP-32.01.01.D0.01-Complaint-and-Appeal-Procedures-for-Faculty-Members-Minor-revisions-6.2.23.pdf>;

<https://www.tamuct.edu/wp-content/uploads/2025/05/2023-SAP-32.01.01.D0.01-Complaint-and-Appeal-Procedures-for-Faculty-Members-Minor-revisions-6.2.23.pdf>;

<https://inside.tamuc.edu/aboutus/policiesproceduresstandardsstatements/rulesprocedures/32EmployeeRelation/32.01.01.R0.01GrievanceandAppealProcessforFacultyMembers.pdf>;

<https://www.wtamu.edu/files/docs/academics/academic-affairs/WT-Faculty-Handbook-2025.pdf>;

https://www.tarleton.edu/policy/wp-content/uploads/sites/142/2022/06/32_01_01_T0_01.pdf;

<https://www.tamucc.edu/governance/rules-procedures/assets/32.01.01.c0.01-complaint-and-appeal-procedures-for-faculty-members.pdf>

Join the union that has your back.

<https://bit.ly/join-tx-aaup>